SUMMARY

Philosophy PhD with experience in research and analysis at universities across the United States and Sweden. Trained at Princeton in logic, probability, and reasoning under uncertainty. Comfortable addressing complex, open-ended questions with both qualitative and quantitative methods — equally at home in a graduate seminar or a Python notebook. Currently working on practical questions about AI alignment and evaluation.

SKILLS

- Analytical reasoning & problem solving. Formal logic, probability, structured thinking on hard, open-ended questions.
- Research & writing. Published in peer-reviewed international journals.
- Teaching. Six years of course design and delivery, with strong student reviews.
- Project management. Co-organized three international research workshops, including budget and multi-stakeholder coordination.
- Software & data. Python, SQL; builds data pipelines and tools.

WORKING STYLE

- Highly adaptable. New tools, new questions, new contexts; career across two continents.
- Quick learner. Picks up new tools and ideas fast; learns by building.
- Creative. Generates new approaches to hard problems; draws on ideas from adjacent and unexpected fields.
- Clear communicator. Technical material for non-experts; from students to senior researchers.
- Collaborative. Long-running relationships with advisors, peers, and students.
